Currently studying my B.A. in Economics. I am very passionate about investment and Economics, very creative, and hard-working, which led me to get involved in several projects related to investment and Economics fields, parallelly to my full time studies. I am National Manager at Argent Spain, a post-university organization about finance and investments, and president of the Loyola University Investment Club, where I am developing my organizational, communication and leadership skills. Previously, I have managed the financial department of an e-Health startup for a year. As an Economics enthusiast, I have written several scientific papers, participated in academic conferences and offered various talks, highly improving my analytical and writing skills. I am also a contributor to a regional newspaper, the blog of various European think tanks, and have attended several summer schools of prestigious investment funds. Native Spanish speaker with an upper-intermediate English level.

Experience
